Novel Approach, Free Resources, Economical Store

Self-Help, Coaching and Counseling

We have been focused on providing quality articles by licensed mental health providers and/or certified wellness/lifestyle/executive coaches during this time of great stress. Many people who need help have lost their insurance, and maybe even much more, so they may not have the money to see their counselor or coach.

"Self-help" is a multi-billion dollar industry, and the quality of materials varies from practical common sense to rather bizarre.

Therefore, we require our authors to be licensed mental health providers, or certified wellness/lifestyle/executive coaches, and we look for articles that offer practical, common sense advice.

Appropriate, high-quality self-help articles can help people through rough times, so we have lots of free articles for immediate download that explain the appropriate balance between self-help, coaching and counseling, and many, many other topics. We also have a local Google website search engine to help you find the right articles on our site.

Self-help articles also provide useful resources for professionals to recommend to help their clients stretch budgets, and to provide materials for self-reflection (so that in-office sessions are more focused). Free articles also provide the author increased web presence and potential clients get greater insight into their thinking.
